

Tool for referencing, using and/or adapting the TIES publication, framework and tools

We encourage people living and working in Tāmaki community to use and/or adapt TIES framework and tools for the common good. We also hope that people in other communities or those working with or for not-for-profit organisations, government agencies or academic institutions will find ways to use or adapt the TIES framework or tools for the common good. We want to encourage people to buy this book so that we can cover costs and use any proceeds to fund other community-led initiatives in Tāmaki. If you can afford to buy this book, please do.

Quoting from this community publication

When quoting from this text, we ask that you credit the source as the 'TIES Team' (rather than Hancock et al), and when quoting from a community story please acknowledge the storyteller.

Using and/or adapting TIES framework and TIES tools

We actively encourage people to use and/or adapt the TIES framework and TIES tools, and we request that you name the 'TIES Team' as the source.

Using TIES materials for academic or other research purposes

We encourage use of TIES Team materials for academic purposes, including teaching, presentations, lectures, study or research purposes. The details of such use will be negotiated on a case-by-case basis.

We expect academics to uphold the academic and ethical guidelines of their academic institutions. We also expect researchers to adhere to the relevant ethical guidelines of their professional associations such as: Aotearoa New Zealand Association of Social Anthropologists.

Please direct any enquiries to Frances Hancock at Frances@ardra.co.nz or Puamiria Maaka at manager@twp.org.nz to negotiate the terms of such use.
